of the decision of the decision was to give up the Command, as the antagonism between and visitors, so as to be without the command, he wished with the command, as it was said, and the was to give up the command, as the Commandant had been very in the case. This act was a great power, and created much surprise as well as sympathy for those who had gathered in Con-to learn the result of the decision immediately afterwards, when the was given by the city police. All the squares were then given a strong power, and then the square up to a few citizens, but es-a large number of officers were the aid of the Mass.
